

“THINKABOUTIT” THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

Monday; March 17, 2008

If you look around you today, you will probably see a lot of green. For those of us who live in the great North Central states, the green will be worn in honor of St. Patrick's day; but, if you were to venture out into some of the warmer climates, the green just might be on the trees and in the lawns. For a part of the country, Spring has sprung and it looks green.

One of the great things about this time of year is the appearance of a new beginning. With warmer temperatures and non-frozen moisture, the earth just seems to come to life.

Spring is a time when life can begin in another way, deep within us. The cold dreary weather may have had an impact on our spirits; why not use this transitional season to boost our morale. Have you been feeling yucky? If so, then let's let the green around us today (whether in nature or on neckties) spark us to be reborn and rejuvenated.

Think about it! For the Madison Avenue Church of Christ; this is Charlie Wharton.
